Proper hand washing is a good health habit that is extremely important in preventing the spread of contagious illnesses, like the flu. Wash your hands often with soap and warm water to remove dirt, debris, and germs. Wash your hands:

1. Wet hands with warm water. When warm water is not available, wash for a longer period of time.
2. Rub hands together and work into a lather from wrist to fingertip. Scrub under fingernails, between fingers, back of hands, and under jewelry. Wash for at least 20 seconds to ensure removal of dirt and germs.
3. Apply regular liquid or bar soap to hands. Antibacterial soap is NOT necessary.
4. Rinse hands completely with warm water.
5. Dry hands thoroughly with a clean towel.
6. Use the towel to turn off the water faucet to not dirty freshly cleaned hands.
